METHOD OF COLLECTION—

In peace-time the normal Census procedure requires about twelve months for the delineation and mapping of patrol areas. These areas are covered by approximately 10,000 collectors, who are engaged for two to three weeks in a house-to-house distribution and collection of forms, and in scrutinizing the completed forms for possible errors of omission or commission. Such a method being impossible in June, 1945, the procedure adopted was based on that successfully carried out when the Supplementary Civilian Register was taken in 1943. The procedure was as follows :—

(1) An ample supply of Occupation Survey cards was printed and made available at every post office in Australia at least three weeks before the date of the Ration Book issue (2nd and 3rd June, 1945). The number of cards allotted to each post office was determined by the Chief Electoral Officer for the Commonwealth, who was responsible for their distribution. Material assistance in distribution was given by the Postmaster-General's Department. In all, 15,180,000 cards were printed and distributed among the various States as follows :—

New South Wales (including Australian Capital Territory) ..	6,000,000
Victoria	4,350,000
Queensland	2,100,000
South Australia (including Northern Territory)	1,350,000
Western Australia	900,000
Tasmania	480,000

(2) Suitable publicity was arranged to acquaint the public with the nature of the information required, the procedure to be followed, and the general purposes of the Survey. An explanatory statement was also printed on the card itself.

(3) Each person fourteen years of age and over on 1st June, 1945, and entitled to a ration book, was required under National Security (General) Regulations to obtain and complete an Occupation Survey card and to hand it to the Ration Book Issuing Officer before receiving a ration book. A supply of blank cards was available at each Ration Book Issuing Centre for the relatively small number who did not bring cards with them. Although the card was arranged so that those who desired privacy could fold it and place it in the usual sized envelope, very few persons used an envelope.

(4) The completed cards were forwarded by registered parcel post from the Ration Book Issuing Centres direct to the appropriate statistical coding centres, with a printed advice note giving the name of the Ration Book Issuing Centre and the number of cards included in the parcel. The coding centres were located as follows :—

State or Territory.	Location of Coding Centre.
Queensland	Brisbane.
New South Wales and Australian Capital Territory	Sydney.
Victoria, South Australia, Western Australia, Tasmania and Northern Territory	Melbourne.

(5) Special arrangements were made to obtain information in respect of inmates of mental institutions, gaols, and other institutions operating on a " coupon bank system ".

Occupation Survey cards were collected on 2nd and 3rd June, 1945, and no difficulties were reported by any of the Ration Book Issuing Officers. Less than 100 persons refused to fill in a card. The name, address and identity card number of these persons was taken, and in no case was it found necessary to take legal action to obtain the required information.

STAFF—

The Brisbane Coding Centre was placed under the control of Mr. S. E. Solomon, Deputy Government Statistician ; the Sydney Centre under Mr. W. J. Willcocks of the Bureau of Statistics and Economics, Sydney ; and the Melbourne Centre under Mr. J. H. Kenny, also of the Bureau of Statistics and Economics, Sydney.

The section leaders were recruited entirely from returned servicemen. They were recommended initially by officers of the Department of Labour and National Service and were interviewed by the Officer-in-Charge of the Coding Centre before engagement. The section leaders were given periods of training varying from one month to three months before the Occupation Survey was taken.

The coding staff was composed entirely of females without previous coding experience. In New South Wales they were all ex-members of the Women's Land Army who had had previous clerical experience. In Victoria and Queensland they were temporary female staff engaged through the usual Public Service channels. It was not found possible to give more than one week's training to these staffs prior to the commencement of coding.

The card punching staffs in Sydney and Melbourne were engaged prior to the taking of the Survey, and received at least six weeks' training before the punching of Survey cards was commenced.

CODING AND CARD PUNCHING—

On receipt at the Coding Centre the Occupation Survey cards were checked against the advices sent by the Ration Book Issuing Centres. Prior to the commencement of coding the cards were sorted according to sex and placed in specially constructed boxes each holding 1,600 cards. They were filed according to the Ration Book Issuing Centre from which they were received, but cards from persons whose usual place of residence was in another State were extracted and sent to that State for coding.

The following items were coded and the appropriate codes written in black ink on the lines provided in the right-hand margin of the card :—

Question 3. Local Government Area.
Question 4. Year of Birth.
Question 5. Sex.
Question 6. Conjugal Condition.
Question 7. Grade of Occupation.
Question 7 (d). Duration of Unemployment. Cause of Unemployment.
Question 8. Business or Industry.
Question 9 (a). Present Occupation.
Question 9 (b). Usual Occupation in 1939.

Industry and Occupation were coded according to the Classification of Industries and Occupations as specially revised for use in the Occupation Survey.

The revision of the industry code list was mainly designed to make arrangement of the code-numbers more suitable for machine tabulation. The revision of the occupation classification was much more radical. Its purposes were three-fold—

(i) to produce a purely occupational code suitable for use in a Survey in which every civilian aged fourteen years and over is required to state both (a) present occupation on 1st June, 1945, and (b) usual occupation in 1939 ;

(ii) to provide a two-figure code in respect of principal groups of occupation, in order to economize machine sorting time and to facilitate detailed analysis of the principal occupational groups ;

(iii) to provide a grouping of occupations by status, e.g., professional, clerical, skilled, intermediate and unskilled manual workers ; and to distinguish these from other types of occupations with special characteristics, e.g., rural, protective services, personal services (not private households) and private domestic services.

In order more clearly to define the precise nature of certain occupations, separate headings were provided to distinguish those whose activities involved both managerial duties and pursuit of an occupation from those engaged in an occupation without managerial duties (e.g., under " Indoor Selling Activities " separate headings and code-numbers distinguished " Proprietors " and " Managers " from " Salesmen or Shop Assistants "; " Proprietors " or " Managers " operating farms were distinguished from " Other farm workers "). This, however, was for clarity of definition of " occupation " and did not provide an exhaustive grading of occupation. Grade of occupation (" Employer ", " Employee ", " Unemployed ", &c.) was coded entirely separately but was tabulated to show numbers in each grade of occupation for each industry and for each type of occupation.

This code, which was based partly on the occupation code used for the Sixteenth Census of the United States was drawn up at short notice by officers of the Bureau of Census and Statistics, Canberra, after consultation with the Government Statistician of Queensland and certain of his senior officers. As indicated, the occupation code was for a special purpose, although it may become the basis of future occupational coding when its imperfections are discovered and rectified. Any such code must necessarily be arbitrary in some respects.

Code-numbers and occupational headings were so arranged as to provide for the new grouping without precluding the possibility of comparison of numbers shown under the various occupations in June, 1945, with those shown in the National Register, 1939, and Supplementary Civilian Register, 1943.

Occupation Survey cards were generally well filled in, but it was found that the number of cases in which replies were not given to questions was much greater than in the 1933 Census. For certain questions, namely, year of birth and sex, it was frequently possible to fill in missing particulars from the Identity Card number ; Local Government Area could be deduced with reasonable accuracy from the usual place of residence ; it was possible in some cases to ascertain industry by reference to occupation and vice versa, and the name and address of the employer gave a further indication of the industry of the person concerned. The following tables, however, show clearly that the method of collection adopted is not as satisfactory as the method used at a general census, when collectors are paid to collect and check the householders' schedules for omissions and inaccuracies before despatch to the Statistician.

Because the information contained in the Occupation Survey was needed urgently for administrative purposes, and also because of the difficulty of obtaining staff, complete " check coding " was not possible. In all cases the first box of cards (1,600) coded by each coder was fully checked. Thereafter, sample checking was performed by section leaders and by a few specially selected coders. More detailed checking was done of the work of coders whose work was least efficient.

A similar procedure was adopted with the punching operation. Full verification was performed on the first box of cards punched by each operator. Thereafter a 20 per cent. sample was verified in detail, and bulk checks were performed by the Supervisor of Punching.

In New South Wales, special sections were engaged in coding the Local Government Area, as the New South Wales State Statistician required figures for the metropolitan area divided according to individual municipalities. In other States no dissection of the metropolitan area was attempted.

TABULATIONS—

The following tabulations were made for each sex in each State :—

(1) Present Occupation (Question 9*a*) in full detail (four-figure code) for each Grade of Occupation (Question 7) separately.

(2) Year of Birth (Question 4) classified according to Conjugal Condition (Question 6) for each Grade of Occupation (Question 7) separately.

(3) Industry (Question 8) in full detail (four-figure code) classified according to Year of Birth (Question 4) for each Grade of Occupation (Question 7)—persons not gainfully occupied grouped together.

(4) Conjugal Condition (Question 6) classified by Industry (Question 8) (Females only). Employers and persons working on own account but not employing labour grouped and each of the other gainfully occupied grades of occupation shown separately.

(5) Duration of Unemployment classified according to Cause of Unemployment (Question 7*d*).

(6) Present Occupation (Question 9*a*) classified according to Industry (Question 8). All gainfully occupied grades grouped together. This tabulation was not made in full detail—both occupation and industry were tabulated on three figures of code.

(7) Present Occupation (Question 9*a*) (three figures of code only) in each Local Government Area (Question 3). All gainfully occupied grades grouped together ; not gainfully occupied grades shown separately. Metropolitan Area as a unit in all States except New South Wales, where metropolitan area was divided into its component municipalities.

(8) Present Occupation (Question 9*a*) (three figures of code only) classified according to Previous Occupation (Question 9*b*) (three figures of code only) for all gainfully occupied grades (Question 7) grouped together.

The tabulations for all States except Queensland were made on the Hollerith plant located in the Bureau of Census and Statistics at Canberra while those for Queensland were made on the Powers plant of the Bureau of Industry, Brisbane.

Although certain of the above-mentioned tabulations have not been published, they are available in this Bureau for each State. Should details be required application should be made to the Commonwealth Statistician, Canberra.
